It stimulates not only ethical awareness, responsibility and compassion but also guides an individual to make critical thinking, understanding others, decision making and reflecting both on one's own thoughts and thoughts of others. It enables an individual to overcome social prejudices, class discrimination and cultural stereotypes. The traditional approach towards ethics theories like Utilitarianism theory of Mill, De-ontological theory of Kant and others and to choose a single theory from them as THE theory. But society has changed, social issues have changed. So approaches have changed, thinking has changed. People now have more empathetic approach. The modern approach is, understanding the different ethical theories, and developing and forming ethical views taking the best from all the theories.
