Question: How was the STUDENT'S SEMINAR

REPORT

The feedback gathered from both teachers and students following the student seminar held on July 15, 2021, provides valuable insights into the perceived success and areas for improvement of the event.

- Firstly, focusing on the teachers' responses, the majority rated the seminar positively, with 13 teachers describing it as "good" and only 1 teacher rating it as "fair." This overwhelming positive response from the teachers indicated that they generally found the seminar to be well-organized, engaging, and meeting their expectations. The single "fair" rating suggested that there have been some minor issues or aspects that could be improved upon, although it did not detract significantly from the overall positive impression.
- On the other hand, the feedback from students paints a slightly different picture, albeit still predominantly positive. A substantial number of students, 30 in total, rated the seminar as "good," indicated that they found it to be highly satisfactory, valuable, and engaging. Another 13 students rated it as "satisfactory," suggested that while they found the seminar beneficial, there y have been areas where improvements could be made to enhance their experience further. Importantly, none of the students rated the seminar as "fair," indicated that overall, the students were satisfied with the event.
- The interpretation of these feedback results revealed several key points. Firstly, the alignment between teacher and student perceptions of the seminar's success is generally positive, with both groups predominantly rating it favorably. This indicates a shared appreciation for the seminar's content, delivery, and overall effectiveness in achieving its objectives.
- The discrepancy in the number of "good" ratings between teachers and students (13 teachers vs. 30 students) suggested that both groups' consensus on the seminar's quality reinforces its overall positive reception.
- Therefore, the seminar received largely positive feedback from both teachers and students, there are opportunities to further enhance certain aspects based on the feedback received. This feedback analysis underscores the importance of continuous improvement and responsiveness to participant feedback in educational events like student seminar

GRAPH OF FEEDBACK CUM ORIENTATION (EXAM RELATED 27.09.2020)

Question: Have you understood everything and any queries.

REPORT

The following comments were revealed from the feedback cum orientation (exam-related event on September 27, 2020) which were given below:.

- The data indicated that all 47 students responded affirmatively to understanding the information provided during the orientation, with none reporting confusion or lack of comprehension ("no" responses were zero). This overwhelmingly positive response suggested that the orientation session was effective in delivering clear and understandable information to the students.
- However, when it comes to the responses to queries related to the orientation, a starkly different pattern emerges. None of the students responded affirmatively with a "yes" to the queries asked, while 47 students responded negatively with a "no."
- One plausible interpretation could be that while students grasped the content delivered during the orientation session, they have found no queries as the information were clear and non-ambiguous. This suggested that orientation content and the subsequent queries, not been raised and no need of need refinement.
- Thus the high understanding reported by students reflected positively on the effectiveness of the orientation in delivering content, depicted better student engagement and comprehension among students related to orientations or exam-related events.

REPORT

The feedback gathered from first-year general students following the orientation program held on November 27, 2020, provided valuable insights into their initial experiences and perceptions of their first day in college.

- The responses from students regarding their overall experience on the first day were overwhelmingly positive, with 30 students rating it as "good." This indicated that a significant majority found the orientation program to be informative, engaging, and conducive to their transition into college life.
- Additionally, 5 students rated their experience as "satisfactory." While fewer in number compared to those who rated it "good," these responses indicated that while these students found the orientation program acceptable, there were areas for improvement or aspects they felt could have been better addressed.
- Regarding queries or questions raised by students during the orientation, there were no responses indicating that students felt their queries were unanswered ("no" responses). This implied that students felt their questions were adequately addressed, either during the orientation sessions themselves or through the materials and information provided. The absence of negative feedback in this aspect indicated that the college effectively managed to provide sufficient information and support to address students' initial concerns and queries.
- In interpreting these feedback results, it is evident that the majority of first-year general students had a positive experience during their first day in college, thanks to the orientation program. The high number of "good" ratings reflects the program's success in creating a welcoming and informative environment for new students.
- Therefore the orientation program received predominantly positive feedback from first-year general students, there is valuable feedback to consider for future improvements. Addressing the minor areas for enhancement suggested by students who rated their experience as "satisfactory" could contribute to an even more successful orientation experience, ensuring that all incoming students feel fully prepared and welcomed into the college community.
